

Equal Access to Abortion, Everywhere.

ABORTION ACCESS IS A RIGHT – IT'S TIME TO PROTECT IT

The Women's Health Protection Act (WHPA) works toward a future where every person—regardless of who they are and where they're from—is free to make the personal health decisions that are best for themselves, their lives, and their families, without political interference.

When passed, WHPA will protect the right to abortion throughout the United States.

WHPA Addresses the Current Attacks on Abortion Access

Equal access to abortion care—everywhere—is essential for social and economic equality, reproductive autonomy, and the right to make our own decisions with dignity and self-determination.

But today, anti-abortion state lawmakers are restricting access to abortion care by passing hundreds of laws designed to prohibit and severely limit abortion access in the U.S., despite constitutional protections.

Every day without congressional action means more people are being denied their constitutional right to abortion. We need a federal legislative solution. WHPA is that solution.

Working Toward Reproductive, Economic, and Racial Justice

People hurt most by abortion restrictions are those already facing barriers to accessing health care and bearing the brunt of the pandemic and economic crisis—particularly Black, Indigenous and People of Color (BIPOC) and those working to make ends meet. Ensuring access to abortion care is central to the pursuit of Reproductive Justice and the human rights to maintain bodily autonomy and live in safe and sustainable communities.

Voters Support WHPA

A strong majority of voters (61% nationally) support a new national law that would protect the constitutional right to access abortion by creating a nationwide safeguard against bans and medically unnecessary restrictions on abortion.*
